Jewelry making is a traditional skill of the gipsy communities and about 100 families are involved in the production.

Tulsi (Ocinum tenuiflorum) called also Holy Basil is a sacred plant in Hindu belief, specially in the worship of Vishnu and his avatar Krishna.

The Tulsi seeds and mango tree beads are natural or dyed with azo-free dyes which make the necklaces, bracelets and earrings light and colorful.

Our partner is a registered NGO established by and for the economic development of Vaghiri community. Vaghiri is one of the nomadic tribe of South India. Traditionally, the men hunt while the women make various ornaments out of beads. The producers' organization has developed different programs including skill trainings and designing. The NGO runs also a school and homes.
